General Comments
Adil Arlindo Manjabosco died in 2016, leaving his children in charge of the Manjabosco family agribusiness investments in Bahia and Rio Grande do Sul, including farming, cattle raising, and wholesale of machinery and equipment for agricultural use (1). Carolina Manjabosco Turra, Eduardo Antônio Manjabosco, Karina Manjabosco de Freitas and Marco Antônio Manjabosco are all partners in Agropecuária Mariana Manjabosco, Agropecuária Adil Manjabosco, and Alvorada Sistemas Agrícolas (2). Eduardo Antônio Manjabosco is a partner in the Cooperativa dos Produtores Rurais da Bahia (Cooperfarms), present also in Goiás and Tocantins states (3). Alvorada Sistemas Agrícolas is a company that officially represents the John Deere brand in Rio Grande do Sul (4). In 2009, a temporary embargo was imposed on the Manjabosco's property in Formosa do Rio Preto (BA) by Bahia's Environment Secretary due to building a water cooptation system in the permanent preservation area (APP) of the property and diverting the nearby river course (5). Two of the linked companies - Agropecuária A. Manjabosco and Agropecuária Mariana Manjabosco - were part of a corruption operation led by the Federal Police (Avati) concerning tax fraud, money laundering, and criminal association, which involved eight well-established agribusiness companies (most of which located in the West of Bahia) and the issuing of false invoices by shell companies with the purpose of concealing the exit of produced goods to other states (6). Agropecuária Manjabosco has an authorization issued by Inema in 2021 allowing the clearance of 7,057 hectares of native vegetation in Fazendas Novale II, III, IV and V to implement agricultural activities, valid until September 2023 (7).
